SERVICE SPOTLIGHT:
RESPONDUS 4.0

One thing we have learned from our surveys regarding online exams is that instructors are feeling understandably frustrated by the time it takes to translate their word document exams into software. We spoke with Emory's wonderful Academic Technology Services Team and learned that Respondus 4.0 allows a more streamlined experience for turning word documents into Canvas quizzes. Please feel welcome to read more about it here and below:

"To help automate the process of migrating quiz content typed in Word or other formats, Emory has licensed Respondus 4.0 for all instructors. The application is available for download from Software Express (https://software.emory.edu/express). This document will outline the basics for migrating simple quiz content created in Word into Canvas; much more detailed documentation for different question types is available in the Respondus Knowledge Base (https://web.respondus.com/he/respondus/resources) or you can ask Teaching and Learning Technologies by emailing classes@emory.edu." You can also view a video tutorial on the vendor website.

WE NEED YOUR FEEDBACK!

Back in late Spring 2020, we sent out a survey about online exam experiences and solicited your thoughts on using paper exams again in future semesters. We have used those answers to create a more tailored survey this semester; with the New Year and two semesters of online learning under our belts, we would like to see what your thoughts are now, so we can determine next steps for our service. We know survey fatigue is real, but we would be so grateful if you would complete this survey, as it is imperative we get as many responses as possible.

Would you rather fill it out over the phone? We're happy to help! Please sign up for a time here or email us at testingandevaluation@registrar.emory.edu.

As always, thank you for being T&E customers!
